SOCIAL SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

I am an enthusiastic but critical designer. Always looking for new opportunities to learn and always thinking about philosophical issues. I have a high analytic ability and am empathic and social. In teams I perform well, I am a good listener and people can always come to me for input. In a quick moment I can offer a different perspective to someone else's project.

ORGANISATIONAL SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

In all my projects I have collaborated with stakeholders and regularly asked for their input. I can organise a safe spaces for discussion and exploration of difficult topics. Furthermore, I easily present my findings and insights to my team in a clear presentation.

COMPUTER SKILLS AND COMPETENCES

I am skilled in Adobe Creative Suite (photoshop, illustrator, premiere, after effects), animation video editing, digital sketching (procreate/autodesk sketchbook) and the Microsoft Office package.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

In my free time I do professional deep sea diving in which I have Rescue Diver qualifications. This requires me to collaborate with others very closely and without verbal communication. Sometimes also with people I have not met before the dive. I am quickly comfortable around new people, both nationally as internationally. Furthermore, diving is based on trust, both in gear and in your team. It is crucial to be trustworthy and take responsibility when necessary.

HEAD OF CUSTOMER EXPERIENCE AND PEOPLE INSIGHTS AT PHILIPS LIGHTING

Loes has made an excellent impression during her internship working on 'Customer Experience' and 'Designing for Goodwill'. She clearly stood out with her reliable nature and hard working attitude (in team and individual). Loes is capable of conceptual thinking, going beyond the obvious and interpreting data to make it relevant. Next to this, Loes has given an outstanding presentation to the Design team, clearly communicating her findings and conclusions. Recommended!

INTERN AT PHILIPS LIGHTING
(CONTENT CREATOR)

'Efficient and straight to the point' is what comes to mind when thinking about the time working together with Loes at Philips Lighting. While we participated in different projects, Loes was easy to talk to, for feedback and brainstorms, even with projects she did not participated in herself. I was particularly impressed by Loes' ability to listen to others and offer new insights. While having a focus on retail, she would participate in a discussion to help the progress of another project about entertainment. That objective view she could take on takes time to develop among professionals, but seemed to come naturally to her.

On a more personal level, she knew how to make me feel welcome on my first week in the office. She showed me around the office without being asked to do so, and invited me to spend lunch together. While this seems a simple task, it helped me (and the others that followed) to feel quickly more at home.

For that reason, Loes would be an asset to any team requiring design thinking and exploration research.
